47 Years of postal history inquiry in the Pennsylvania Postal Historian

In mid-1973, Ray Ruthrauff, shortly to become the Historian's first Editor, agreed to take the lead as secretary for whatever communications might need to be typed in the weeks and months to come. Harry Yeager, later our esteemed first Secretary, and Ruthrauff had "been discussing the formation of a Pennsylvania postal history society" a few years before this time.

Others had been thinking similar thoughts, but "nothing more has come of" those plans. Quoting further from that initial call-to-arms letter, Ruthrauff wrote, "Both Harry and I feel that you can be of great assistance in the formation of such a group...."

Shortly afterward, a handful of men did render their assistance by gathering together for the first PaPHS organizational meeting (January 19, 1974). Its purpose would be "to cultivate and promote" the study of Pennsylvania covers and letters and postal history matters in general. This core group consisted of Yeager and Ruthrauff, aided by John DeLuca, Art Gregg, Jim Keally, Jim Russell, Sidney Fingerhood, Blair Gibbs, John Kay, Dick Longacre, and Hank Hiorth.

The dues were set, a Constitution discussed, and the memorable footprint: Box 309, Darby PA, was established at the February meeting. Everything that followed constitutes forty years of estimable postal history endeavor.

The Historian continues to be, despite understandable ups and downs, a wonderful repository of articles and research, all of which are still of continuing use today --no need to reinvent the wheel. This Index proves this laudably throughout its ever growing pages.

Through ten Editors, the Historian has numbered about 21500 pages. Starting as a monthly newsletter, it quickly settled into the bi-monthly mode until recently, when a quarterly Historian seemed best.

One of the prime purposes of the 40th Anniversary Index is the chronological list of article titles from 1974 through early-2013. All of these entries have thumbnail summaries to allow easy identification of the articles' contents.

Beyond that are many pages of author names alphabetically along with their articles, volume and page. This arrangement allows members to follow those individual writers who express similar research or collecting interests, and a help in building bibliographies.

Following are additional pages of article titles arranged alphabetically by Pennsylvania town name or county. This facilitates members' own research when verifying new cover dates, identifying routes, regional or personal names, etc. It cuts to the quick the precise whereabouts of 1,325 articles of Pennsylvania postal history data and information. Further, there are separate pages of well researched Philadelphia County history topics.

Leading off the Index, and a valuable indicator as to where we've been (and expect to go), is a general concordance table. It outlines the growth of our Society through its bi-monthly/quarterly bulletin, membership growth, issue of special publications, etc.

The Index should be a source of pride to all members, based on articles written by renown giants of our hobby. A few of these have gone on to their reward, but others continue to paint a more and more detailed picture of the complexities and enjoyment to be found by collecting Pennsylvania Postal History.

And more so, the fortieth anniversary index provides an inspiration to new generation of Pennsylvania postal history writers and researchers. It points the way to those myriad of Historian articles containing ideas and topics, names, lists, data, and illustrations that are the Historian. Within the present 186 issues we find a multitude of styles and "angles" that readers can emulate through their own articles as the Society pushes forward toward its fiftieth anniversary in 2023.

This most recent Pennsylvania Postal Historian Index celebrates the 47th year since the birth of the PaPHS. The non-reproducible .pdf-only Index is available for $9.00 eMailed from the compiler, Tom Clarke (see the latest Historian for his current mailing address, or eMail at ocl-tom@ix.netcom.com).

Members will gain insight into their own collections by reflecting on the mass of material included. All are encouraged to read with an eye to writing their own articles or update a previous one, and derive inspiration from Historian writers. Ordinary back issues are available from the same address for $7.00 by eMail. For special, oversized issues please inquire.
